New Report Reviews Business Intelligence and Performance Management Service Providers

STAMFORD, CT / September 06, 2006 – A new report from AMR Research has recognized Archstone Consulting, an independent strategy and operations management consultancy, for its strong program management in the implementation of business intelligence solutions. The report, “An Executive Guide to Selecting BI and Performance Management Service Providers,” focused on third-party service providers with dedicated BI and performance management practices, assessing each practice’s focus, skills competition, and approach to services.

“The AMR Research report identified our ability to manage programs effectively, as well as apply a more strategic and holistic approach to business intelligence and performance management than other firms,” states Mark Schmeling, principal and CFO advisory services practice leader, Archstone Consulting.

Alan Lowe, vice president and controller with Brunswick Corporation commented, “Archstone Consulting has been instrumental in assisting Brunswick with developing our strategic business intelligence roadmap to drive greater decision-making capabilities.”
